are expected to design, develop and rollout the Management Development Programmes (EDP, SMDP and MMDP) across the public sector through NIPAM with the necessary skills needed to perform their task successfully.

The training drew in 29 participants that were divided into groups scattered throughout NIPAM's campus. Dr Jafet Nelongo coordinator for NIPAM's Management Development Programmes indicated that the training was an overall success, and the training learning outcomes were achieved. He went on to mention that the training gave NIPAM a new perspective on how to improve the quality of its training and that the training imparted onto NIPAM a template to follow in seeking the accreditation of NIPAM courses.

The Singapore Civil Service College was established as a statutory board under the Public Service Division in 2001. As the heart of learning for the Singapore Public Service, the college delivers an innovative, inspiring and impactful learning experience for public officers. The college's main aim is to support initiatives that bring about change, learning and collaboration across the Public Service of Singapore, by ensuring that public agencies and officers are ready to embrace the future.

NIPAM facilitated a Training of Trainers course (ToT) with the aid of the Government of Singapore through their Civil Service College. The weeklong training was carried out via online sessions on NIPAM's Zoom platform. The main purpose of the training was to equip NIPAM resource persons who
